A Salad A Day

The greatest nutritional lack in foods eaten by the families in Virginia, according to studies to date is Vitamin C (also called ascorbic acid). This lack of "C" is even greater in winter months.

In the Appomattox survey over half of the homemakers did not serve foods high in Vitamin C each day, although most of them knew that this was needed. Sixty-one per cent knew that tomatoes are a good substitute for citrus fruit.

Why We Need Vitamin C

Vitamin C is needed for strong blood vessels, good teeth and gums, good bones, healing of wounds and resistance to infection. When diet is very low in this vitamin, gums are tender and bleed easily, joints swell and hurt, and muscles weaken. In advanced stages, the disease called scurvy results. Scurvy is rare now in this country, but many people get too little Vitamin C for their best health. We need some food rich in Vitamin C daily, because the body cannot store much of this vitamin.

Good Sources of Vitamin C

Oranges, grapefruit, tomatoes, strawberries, raspberries, cabbage, green lettuce, cantaoloupes, watermelons. Other fruits and vegetables make a good contribution to Vitamin C intake, when eaten raw and fresh. Foods high in Vitamin C should be eaten as soon as possible after they are gathered. Vegetables and fruits should be stored in a cool place to retain C values. A head of cabbage kept at room temperature loses as much C in one day as it will in three, if kept in the refrigerator. Fruits if frozen quickly after gathering retain most of their vitamin content.

Vitamin C Easily Destroyed

Heat and air both destroy Vitamin C, so most foods should be kept cool, covered, and cooked as short time as possible to taste good. This is why we recommend the cold pack method of canning tomatoes. The longer foods are cooked the more Vitamin C is lost. Salad greens that are high in C when raw, lost most of it when cooked.

Rules for Cool, Crisp Salads

1. Have the greens for your salad crisp, clean and dry.
2. Keep salad vegetables and greens fresh by storing in a covered container in your refrigerator until used.
3. Cut fruits in uniform sizes, fairly large with clean cut edges; drain before chilling.
4. Prevent discoloration of fruits by coating with lemon juice or other acid fruit juices.
5. Add the appropriate dressing to greens just before serving, as they will wilt.
6. Dress green salads with only enough dressing to coat each leaf, if dressing stands in them.
7. Serve chilled salads on chilled plates, especially if congealed, or if weather is hot.
8. Serve salads on plates large enough to leave a margin around the salad (avoiding spots on the table cloth.
9. For convenience or variety, serve salads on large plate or bowl so that everyone may serve himself.

ABBITT LISTS NEW BOOKLET AVAILABLE

Representative Watkins M. Abbitt announced today that he has available pamphlets explaining the provisions of the Social Security laws relating to disabled people.

The congressman said he had received a number of inquiries as to the effect of the 1956 Amendments to the Social Security Act which provided certain benefits to disabled people. He said the publication entitled "If You Are Disabled" has been made available by the Social Security Administration to answer questions relating to these provisions.

Abbitt said he would be glad to make these available to residents of the Fourth District who are interested in the disability amendments.

Inquiries should be addressed to Hon. W. M. Abbitt, 1008 New House Office Building, Washington, D. C.

Worn collars, cuffs, and pockets rapidly shorten the life of a shirt—so check for breaks in the fabric of your husband's shirts before they are put away.

Virl home economists have a few hints for the budget-minded homemaker who turns shirt collars.

Mark carefully the center backs and fronts of both the collar and the neck band. When you place the turned collar in the neck band, match these centers and pin from the center out, being particularly careful not to stretch the edges. Ease in any fullness.

French cuffs can be turned in the same way as collars. Worn straight cuffs present a different problem. Rip the double row of stitches a-

The meeting was then open for services. We had with us Rev. R. E. Williams from Lynchburg, Va. He was the guest speaker. Spoke from the subject: Ask and it shall be given, Seek and ye shall find. Don't forget the buttonhole in the neckband. It gets a lot of wear, especially if the collar fits snugly. Rework the buttonhole by hand as soon as it begins to wear.

Abbitt Wants Cuts Made In Ike's Spending

Representative Watkins M. Abbitt (D., Va.) has expressed the view that unless all Americans assume a responsibility for reducing Federal expenditures, there is little hope of curbing the rising trend in spending which this year produced another record budget.

"We see inflation sapping the vitals of our economy and we are offered little prospect of curbing Federal expenditures unless a real, honest-to-goodness effort is made on the part of our people to impress upon government the necessity for holding the line against further increases," Abbitt said.

The Fourth District Congressman spoke to a meeting of the Production Credit Association of Farmville, where he assailed the proposed $71.8 billion dollar administration budget as one of the greatest dangers facing the country today. He said the budget should be cut "in every single place," where non-essential spending is provided and laid his principal stress upon the items for foreign aid and the huge domestic spending program which he said must be cut to "preserve our national economy."

Abbitt, a long-time foe of high government spending, said he thinks the proposed budget is appalling, but that "in the long run I think we are fortunate that the budget was presented as it was." Because of this, he pointed out, "the people have been shocked into a realization of the fact that unless some drastic changes are made in the near future we will have a socialist government with all power centered in the Federal government."

Booker Plans Promotion For April 9 Here

Appomattox County is going to come up with a maximum potential participation for reception of expected swarms of visitors to Virginia during the long - heralded Jamestown Festival Year of 1957. However, some of the plans are subject to adjustment and remain in a formative stage.

This week, service station people began reporting an increase in the number of out-of-state cars passing through Appomattox. One attendant noted that several out-of-state cars stopped and said they had been to Williamsburg and had driven this way to look up the McLean House en route home.

Local plans for an observance of the 92nd anniversary of the signing of Peace on April 9 between Gens. Robert E. Lee and Ulyssia Grant, got both a shot in the arm and a slow-down sign this week.

The boost was in the acceptance by Malcolm Booker of appointment as a special committee to arrange for having a man in full Confederate uniform at the McLean House on Tuesday, April 9. Mr. Booker planned a trip this week to make final plans for the appearance of a man in Confederate uniform on Tuesday, April 9, and he also said he would look into the possibilities of having a counterpart in full Union uniform for that date.

Such a development would make for a field day for camera fans at Old Appomattox on April 9.

The appointment of Mr. Booker was announced by Calvin Robinson, general chairman of the Jamestown Year Festival Committee for Appomattox County.

The disquieting note in plans for April 9 was that hopes to have a large number of 7th and 11th grade school groups visit Old Appomattox on April 9th, was running headon into previous plans of many groups, limited to one trip, to go to Jamestown..

First replies received from invitations to come to Appomattox by school bus on April 9, were meeting with positive interest, but facing the reality of prior commitments.

However, as of this writing, there is no reason to believe that a larger than normal group of school groups would not be here on April 9, and local plans were proceeding for their reception and entertainment..

There is still hope that the number of visitors in Appomattox this year will set a modern record. In any event, the welcome mat is out, and it is accepted as fact that the magical date of April 9 is assuming a growing importance in American history.

Smith Out As Candidate; Beasley In

Latest development in the approaching election for Town Officials in Appomattox is the withdrawal of E. LeRoy Smith as a candidate for the Town Council, and the filing of Grover P. Beasley, Jr.

Beasley filed yesterday, bringing the list of candidates up to ten for the six places on the Council.

Mr. Smith's card of withdrawal appears elsewhere in today's issue.

Mayoll Richard H. Robinson is the only filed candidate for Mayor.

Town election is June 11, and the deadline for filing is sixty days prior to that time.

Mrs. Carr Reports on Plans For Appomattox Day, May 5

Mrs. Frank F. Carr reported yesterday that she was delighted at the response and cooperation being received for a major Jamestown Festival Year event here on Sunday, May 5. Mrs. Carr is chairman of a committee for this event, set up by the Appomattox County Jamestown Year Committee.

According to Mrs. Carr, the major event of the local observance for that date will be a county-wide religious service at the Old Court House, and a Flower Show and other events during the afternoon.

Mrs. Carr announced that Dr. Twyman Williams will be the speaker at a special religious service at 11:20 A. M. at the Old Court House on May 5, and that the Appomattox Lions Club had assumed responsibility for providing chairs and accomodations for the multitude expected, and to provide loud speakers, etc. It is the plan of the committee that such a Peace Religious Service at Old Appomattox might well become an annual Spring event here, and the success of this year's program would be a pattern for future plans.

Dr. Williams is minister of the Appomattox Court House Presbyterian Church, and it is a co-incidence that the Presbyterian church at Old Appomattox Court House was the principal religious group at that site in early days. A student of history and a beloved pastor, Dr. Williams' acceptance of the assignment for May 5 is assurance of the fullest cooperation in making that event a success and a genuine contribution to the cause of Peace in a troubled world.

A number of churches have already indicated their desire to merge their regular services on Sunday, May 5, with this county-wide event.

Mrs. Carr has also advised that May 5 will mark the final day in a tour of Southside Virginia homes and plantations, and that she hopes that a considerable number of out-of-county visitors will be here that day. The Spring Flower Show of the Appomattox Garden Club will be a happy addition to the program for the day, and announcement is awaited as to the location of the show, and for a number of other interesting highlights of the over-all program.

Recognized as one of the outstanding civic leaders among Virginia women, Mrs. Carr is most enthusiastic in her programming of the May 5 event here, and she is assured the full cooperation of all local groups.

4-H CLUB MEETING

The Lucky Clover 4-H Club will meet at 7:30 P. M., with Jane Nash on April 3.
